

Questions

To the Editor:

Apparently the days of robber barons are not over. Once it was paying a pittance to farmers, ranchers, etc., in order to acquire their land for the railroads. Only the barons made the money. Now, it seems that their ghosts inhabit the members of the Readington Township Committee since they are so intent upon "robbing" the land of Solberg Airport.

The legal actions this committee has taken, and plans to take, cost the taxpayers. It is a given that none of the proceeds they expect to receive, once they have obtained the Solberg tract, will benefit one homeowner whose taxes have financed the bond and lawyers' fees.

There is a niggling question in my mind — could any committee member be involved in a real estate firm, perhaps before moving to this area but have kept the connection? Is this connection the one requested to handle the Solberg deal?

The ever present question is: who benefits? Certainly not the Solbergs or the taxpayers.
